Agenda:

1. Introductions
2. Textbook Affordability Metric
   - Jay Coleman presented information about Metric #3: Net Tuition and Fees per 120 hours. Slides are available online at https://libguides.unf.edu/faculty/advisorycouncil
   - This is the beginning of a conversation about how the library can support faculty in reducing the cost of textbooks.
3. Updates (additional information provided below that was not included in meeting)
   - New Liaison Model – each department is now assigned two liaisons who will distribute responsibilities based on expertise. Please share any feedback with Stephanie Race.
     - There has been a 29% increase in the number of library instruction sessions offered for August – September 2018 compared to the same time period in 2017. This includes classes for 16 faculty who had not previously requested library instruction. This should result in higher quality student research.
     - There has been a 196% increase in Research Consultation appointments scheduled for August – September 2018 compared to the same period in 2017.
   - Purchasing Deadlines –
     - Spring Semester course materials October 15, 2018
       - Contact your liaisons or Stephanie Race to request materials. Indicating that items are needed for a course will assist acquisitions in ordering appropriate e-books. Not all e-book licensing includes multiple simultaneous users.
     - Journal or database subscription requests November 15, 2018
       - Contact your liaison. Requests can be submitted year round for items. The Collection Development Committee will begin review of requests December.
   - OneSearch Library Lists is a simple way to create and manage course reading lists from within Canvas. You can link directly to quality articles, ebooks, streaming audio and video, and other digital resources available from the library. Library materials are available at no cost to the student. Contact your liaisons or Dan Feinberg for additional information.
   - Database Day is a new event that will provide students and faculty an opportunity to learn more about various databases. You will receive a separate email with additional information.
     - Thursday, November 8 from 10-3
     - Faculty Lunch & Learn – Library Materials as an Alternative to High Cost Textbooks (registration required)
