On May 18, 2019, we will host a reception to thank civil rights activist and author, Rodney L. Hurst, Sr., for entrusting the UNF Library with his archives. This gift further develops one of the Library’s key initiatives - the growth of our Black History of Jacksonville Collection. This collection serves everyone and provides students from all walks of life and researchers across the globe with accurate, historical facts from our own community members who lived through The Struggle. It also ensures young black men and women in Jacksonville have a connection to their past for generations to come. To view these collections, please visit digitalcommons.unf.edu/spec_coll.

Please join these efforts with the UNF Library Special Collections and University Archives to make your story available worldwide by giving your materials and the necessary financial support for their processing.

A GIFT OF $5,000* WILL HELP

- Make a finding aid to bring your story to scholars, the community and the world through the UNF website
- Purchase archival materials to preserve your significant, historical documents and photographs
- Provide jobs to UNF students to process and digitize your treasures
- Create exhibits with and publicize your collection to educate students and the community

*$5,000 ensures basic processing and digitization of a small collection including the actions noted above. Gifts may vary and can be customized per the needs of donated collections. Additional gifts may be required for detailed processing of larger collections.

Please contact UNF Director of Development for Academic Affairs, Chaz Runfola, to discuss giving your collection: c.runfola@unf.edu or (904) 620-5895

An equal access/equal opportunity university.